The Abraham Kinzie Home Place.

This is where Abraham and Charlotte Kinzie settled when they came to Indiana from Virginia in 1852. The farm is located one mile north of Hoover, eleven miles northeast of Logansport, in Cass Co., Indiana. The barn was built in 1859, and the house in 1862.

Introduction

The work of compiling the records of our family, and writing the family history has been pleasant and interesting work. We obtained the information that we have in the story from my father, John A. Kinzie, while he lived. We wrote down the different events, as he told them, and put it in story form later.

We have enjoyed visiting and corresponding with many of the cousins, and we truly wish to take this opportunity to thank each and every one whom so willingly and promptly responded to our needs and requests. Nearly every one whom we asked for information seemed interested, and gave us encouragement in the work, which helped so much.

We do not claim to have a perfect Family Tree book. We think that would be almost next to impossible. There are, no doubt, mistakes, and we know, some omissions in some of the records. We have put forth every effort to put in every name, did the very best we could. We tried for months to obtain complete information on each record; but some of them seemed in vain—hence, incomplete.

Some interesting material may be left out that might have been put in, but we can publish only what we know, and what was reported to us. However, we hope we have been able to come something near to the expectations of all.

Cordially,

Lora E. Karn

EXPLANATION

It will be noticed, each family record is numbered. Some of the names have a number to the right of the name also. The numbers to the right, indicate the number of his (or her) parent's family record, or, his own family record (as the case may be).

In case both husband and wife are strangers to us, this number also indicates which is the blood relative.

All children who have no given address, indicates they are still living under the parent's address. (With the exception of a very few which we failed to receive.)

The index gives the number of the RECORD, not necessarily the PAGE, found thereon.

GOD

Is there a God? How do we know?
All nature speaks and tells us so.
The earth, the sky, the air we breathe,
The power that rules, we must believe.

Is there a God? We surely know;
Because the good book tells us so.
Poor man with all his mind and wit
Dare not dispute the Holy Writ.

The fool in heart hath said, No God;
But he must feel the chastening rod;
The infidel with much distress,
In dying moments must confess.

There is a God! All power is His,
As well as all creation is;
He's in the sea, the grass and air,
His power is present everywhere

He pushes forth the buds and bloom,
And regulates the sun and moon;
The falling rain He doth supply
And can withhold and make it dry.

Were there no God, no love could be,
No hope to ever make us free,
No remedy to cure our ills,
No principles to rule our wills.

A sad old world 'twould be indeed,
No friend to help in time of need;
In fact no life could then exist
Where there's no power to assist.

There is a God! We surely know!
The voice of wisdom teaches so;
Man can't create a single thing,
This tells us true that God is King.

His mighty waters round us roll—
His thunders sound from pole to pole;
And they who on the earth do dwell,
Must surely know He does things well.

From cloudy pillar, fire and smoke
In ancient days, to man, He spoke:
But now He speaks another way,
Through Christ His Son He speaks today.

Composed by John A. Kinzie

KINZIE FAMILY TREE

David and John Kinsey came to this country from Germany and settled near Lynchburg, Virginia. John was the father of Henry Kinsey, who was our great-great-grandparent, if we have the records correct. (Copied from the C. T. Kinzie's family book.)

In Memory of
JOHN AND VIRGINIA KINZIE

After John recovered from his long affliction which left him a bad cripple, (see history of Abraham and Charlotte Kinzie), he picked up a common education the best he could, by studying at home, and attended a few terms of Normal in Logansport. He acquired a teacher's license about the year of 1870, and taught a summer term of two or three months. He continued teaching school until he had taught nineteen winter and seven summer terms, twenty-six terms in all, in Miami and Cass Counties.

He was baptized into the Old German Baptist Church on September 27, 1862. He was elected to the Deacon's office October 27, 1883, and served in that office, and remained a faithful member in the Mexico district, the rest of his life.

August 27, 1879, he and Virginia A. Miller were united in marriage. She, also, being a member of the Old German Baptist Church. The following year they set up house keeping about two miles north and one half mile west of Mexico (on the corner) in Miami County. There, eight children were born to them. On March 8, 1894 they moved two miles north of Perrysburg, on the Peru and Rochester road. (Now U.S. 31). Two more children were born, and they lived the rest of their lives at this place. The farm has continued in the hands of the family, now being owned by a grandson, Charles Runkle and Son-in-law Frank Karn.

John discontinued teaching a little before making this move. At that time this was a 130 acre farm, and his oldest boys were thirteen and eleven years of age. John being a cripple, made it a hard struggle. They hired a neighbor to help with the farming the first several years; and Virginia worked outside with the boys as much of the time as she could spare from her household duties. She always said it was easier for her to say "Come on boys," than "Go on boys," to the fields. John could not follow a plow or harrow—but he did a lot of hard work such as grubbing, hoeing, fence building and choring. They raised seven children to adult age and afforded a happy home for them all.

In Memory of JOSIAH AND MAGGIE KINZIE

About the year 1880 Josiah, in contemplating marriage with a Logansport girl, Margaret (Maggie) Harp, she told him she didn't want a man who used profane language, drank, or used tobacco. He assured her he he was not guilty of the first two bad habits, but he used tobacco. A habit he had acquired at eight years of age, from carpenters who were building a barn on his father's place. But with the promise he would quit the habit they married on March 31, 1881.

But the tobacco habit had fastened itself on him till he seemed unable to shake it off. Many attempts were made but none were successful until in 1897. It then happened in this way: Josiah with his family of, then, nine children moved to near Chipley, Florida, in Oct., 1896. While there, on one occasion he, with a young man also from Indiana, were driving along a road in a wagon. Overtaking a Florida woman she accepted a ride with them. She soon took a plug of tobacco from her pocket, calmly took a chew and offered both Josiah and the young man a chew, to their astonishment and disgust. Seeing the repulsiveness of a woman chewing and spitting, and remembering afresh his pre-marriage promise—and for the influence upon his children, Josiah threw his tobacco away with a determined vow to never touch it again.

But only those who are temperamental enough to understand can know the struggle that followed. It took years to entirely free himself from its craving, but he finally won. What a lesson for boys and girls to form only good habits.

In October 1898 Josiah and family moved back from Florida onto the old home place where three more children were born, making twelve in all. Josiah's oldest brother Edward Kinzie and family lived on the farm with their mother, Charlotte, (in separate houses, in the same yard), during Josiah's two years stay in Florida.

The hospitality of Grandmother and her love for her children and grandchildren lives on in our memories. The tender scene of her anointing showed her love, as she sat up in bed and tenderly waved her hand and said, "Oh, that I could take them all and fly away." The children and grandchildren were all present at that time.

The children all loved to go through her big house, and down in the basement, and out the south door which opened into the back yard. The path led down to the spring house where always ran pure, cool water, quenching the thirst of all on hot days.

This should remind us of the "pure water of life," in Rev. 22:1, and of the tree of life on either side of that pure river.

After Grandmother's death in 1906, Josiah and Maggie bought the home place, and lived and died there. Maggie passed to the Great Beyond on Jan. 18, 1935, and Josiah on July 8, the same year. Maggie, before her marriage, was a member of the Christian Church in Logansport, and was organist there for two years or more. But after marriage, in March 1884, she and Josiah both were baptized into the Old German Baptist Church and remained steadfast unto the end.

WM. H. KINZIE

In Remembrance of
UNCLE JOSIAH AND AUNT MAGGIE KINZIE

Along with the farming, Uncle Josiah, each spring, with the help of his boys, made many gallons of delicious maple syrup in their large "sugar camp" back in the big woods.

Uncle Josiah and Aunt Maggie welcomed all of their relatives and friends to their home for a meal or over night at all times. They always invited a large crowd home with them from church on Sundays. Aunt Maggie set a long table filled with delicious and wholesome food. It was not uncommon for them to serve dinner to twenty-five or thirty people besides their own large family of twelve children. Not only the work it took, and the food they served was remarkable—but Uncle Josiah so willingly fed all of their horses.

In Memory of
JOHN AND ANN ARNOLD
By Lora E. Karn

John Arnold and Ann Josephine Kinzie were married Oct. 10, 1872, and went to house keeping near Laketon, Wabash Co., Indiana. There two sons were born: Marion Emory and Lawrence E. A bad case of croup seized their children in 1879, and took both of them within one month. How sad! How heart broken they must have been!

Later in the year they moved near Macy, Miami Co., Indiana. There on Jan. 23, 1880, a daughter, Flora Dell, was born to them. A couple years later they moved about three fourths of a mile west, across the County line into Fulton County, but their address was still Macy. Here the three last children were born. The last one, a little girl, only lived twelve days. From this birth Ann took "Milk Leg" and developed a running sore on her ankle, and she had to walk with crutches the rest of her life.

About the year 1889 or 1890, Uncle John built a new house. They lived at this place until about 1898, when they moved near Ora, Pulaski Co., Indiana. In 1909 they sold their home there and moved to Fairview, Missouri. In the meantime Flora was married to Ira Snyder. This marriage failed to prove successful so, after a few years, they separated. Flora took her little son, Lester, and also went to Fairview, and she helped care for her Mother during her last illness; Ann passed away June 2, 1911.

John lived his last few years with Edward and Leah at Logansport, then with Jesse and Ida, who then lived at Joplin, Missouri, and passed away there Nov. 20, 1914, and was buried at the side of his wife near Fairview, Missouri.

END OF FIRST GENERATION

THE FOUR COUSINS' TRIP TO THE WEST

In the fall of 1907 Edward Arnold, Jesse Arnold, Elso Kinzie and Amos Kinzie started on a tour bound for Colorado. Leaving Logansport, Indiana Oct. 15, on four three horsepower Wagoner motorcycles, arriving in Indianapolis next day. There the motorcycles were equipped with "Indianapolis" heavy duty tires which had two and one-half inch tread. They were nearly as heavy as some automobile tires. (Copied from an old newspaper clipping.)

Leaving Indianapolis Oct. 16, they traveled by way of Terre Haute, Indiana and St. Louis, Missouri. Through Missouri they found very bad roads. Between Herman and Gasconade, they rode on the Missouri Pacific railroad ties, over railroad bridges as well as the road bed. Their way of traveling was a novelty in those days, and drew much attention. They had some amusing experiences. While going through Missouri at one place, a backwoodsman and wife came out of the house on a run. "What is them things anyhow?", the woman asked her husband. "I know what them is," he replied, "Them is steam bicycles."

They went through Kansas City and on to Ottawa, Kansas, where they spent several days. By this time they had traveled 715 miles with an average of 9 gallons of gasoline for each machine on the entire trip. The next stop was at Eldorado, where they visited relatives a few days; from there by way of Wichita to Sawyer Kansas.

Ed and Jesse Arnold soon left for Denver Colorado; but Elso and Amos stayed there with Amos Brubakers until Jan. 28, 1908, when they left for Eldorado, Oklahoma. They rode their cycles as far as Hitchcock, Oklahoma. Due to colder weather, they crated their cycles and went the rest of the way by train to their cousins, Markey Falls. On the way the boys stayed one night in a sod house. One creek they came to was too high to ride across so the boys took off their shoes and rolled up their pant legs and waded the creek, pushing the cycles to the other side. They stayed at Falls until April 22, when they left for Colorado. They arrived in Denver on April 27, then on to Berthoud by May 1, to Tom Smiths; this making their trip over 2000 miles.

While visiting here they met the Otey Kesler family. Mrs. Kesler being the boy's fathers' first cousin. They had four boys and two girls. Keslers insisted that they stay through the summer, and they would find work for them, which they did. They worked in the sugar beet fields. The Kesler boys took them to see Estes Park, also visited cousins at Rocky Ford, who took them through the sugar factory.

Late in the fall the boys went to Cimarron, Kansas, arriving Dec. 11, where each of them bought a quarter section of land; and later went back to Sawyer to the Amos Brubaker home. They worked in that vicinity all spring and most of the summer of 1909. They went back to Finney County to look about their land a time or two, and Amos also, took a short trip to Nebraska, where he met Susie Boyd.

The latter part of August, desiring to see their parents, they boarded a train for Logansport, Indiana. After several weeks visit and persuading Elso's sister Ruth to go back with them, they left Nov. 5, for Virginia, Nebraska to visit their Cousins, Henry Brubaker and wife. On Nov. 18, Elso and Ruth left for Kansas; Amos remained in Nebraska. He soon traded his Kansas land for land in Nebraska. On April 17, 1910 Amos was baptized into the Old German Baptist church. The following Dec. 14, Amos and Susan J. Boyd were united in marriage. After a wedding trip to Indiana they were at home in Nebraska.

Ruth, being in ill health, returned home in the spring of 1911, and passed away July 19 of that year. The winter of 1913, Elso came home on a visit. On Jan. 7, 1914 he was united in marriage to Alice Blickenstaff of North Manchester, Indiana. They returned to Finney Co., Kansas, and were at home on his farm there; later buying two more quarter sections of land.

History of
ABRAHAM AND CHARLOTTE KINZIE'S LIFE

This happy family lived on a rough two hundred acre farm in Franklin County, Virginia, east of the Blue Ridge Mountains. This farm was so poor that the father was compelled to work at some other occupation on the side to make a living for his family.

Charlotte, his wife, taught school a few terms before she was married, and five terms after they were married. Each term lasting two or three months. She would gather the little group of ten or twelve pupils around the fireplace in her home to teach them. They had "loud schools" at that time. Each pupil studied out loud. She kept good order but never whipped the children. There was a small room in the house which served as a "jail" and when one needed punishment he was put in jail. This room had a fireplace in it with a large wooden chimney. One day Charlotte put her oldest son, Edward, in jail and he climbed out the chimney, making his clothes all black with soot. At Christmas time Charlotte would make ginger cakes to give the children for a treat.

About two miles from their home was a little village called Bonbrook. It consisted of a store, blacksmith shop, grist mill, post office and a few dwellings. They had to haul their produce to Lynchburg, which was sixty miles away. They raised some corn and wheat for feed but their main crop was tobacco. When the farmers made a trip to Lynchburg, which took several days, they would bring back the supplies that their neighbors needed.

One day Abraham was loading his wagon to take to Lynchburg. The two oldest boys, Edward and John, were about five and three years old. They were at their father's heels watching him get ready to go. Abraham jokingly said, "Don't you boys want to go along?" They said, "Yes." Just as Abraham started Charlotte called to Edward to bring the bread basket from the barn. Edward said, "Now John, you wait on me." When he returned their father had gone out of sight. The boys said, "We'll just walk;" so they started down the road. When they had gone about a half mile they came to a school house. They thought this must be Lynchburg. They went around the school house looking for their father, and when they were unable to find him they became frightened and began to cry. Dan Kessler, a neighbor, came by on horse back and found them and took them home. He told the boys if they ran off again he would put them under a big rock. Their mother was busy working and they had been gone such a short time, that she had not missed them.

They butchered hogs in winter for their meat, and baked cornbread instead of white bread made of wheat flour as we use now. They used some milk and butter, and plenty of fruit and vegetables. When they butchered they would put water in large barrels, and build a bon-fire and heat rocks, and put the rocks into the water to heat it. Tomatoes were not known as a food at that time. Children played with them and sometimes would set them on the shelf to look at. When putting away fruits and vegetables for winter they dried them. Pumpkin butter was the only spread they made. They had no stoves, so they cooked over the open fireplace. The cooking utensils consisted of iron pots which hung on a hook in the fireplace, and long handled iron skillets.

When baking cornbread they put the batter in a skillet and put on an iron cover and set it on the red hot coals and heaped coals of fire over it. Aunt Nellie Abshire had a broad smooth board she spread batter on and set it up before the fire, and the heat from the fire place baked it, when she make Johnny cakes.

One day when John was a very small boy he was watching his father shave, and said, "Father will I ever have a beard like yours?" Abraham replied, "You will have to behave yourself and be a good boy and not cry so much, before your beard will grow." Little John went and sat on a chair and kept very quiet for awhile. Finally his mother called him to rock the baby. He replied, "Oh, I can't Mother, 'cause I'm going to be a good boy so my beard will grow." Every little bit he would feel his chin. Finally he felt a little dirty spot and cried, "Oh Mother! I believe it's coming, I feel a little rough place."

This was in time of slavery. The well-to-do farmers had slaves. While most of the people were good to their slaves through that part of the country, some were very cruel to them. Abraham's parents were members of the Old German Baptist church and did not keep slaves. Charlotte's parents were not members of any church. They kept slaves but were very kind to them. They were treated the same as the family. Aunt Amy, one of the slaves, was so kind to all the children, and the white children loved her as much as their relatives. Aunt Amy's husband was owned by a neighbor. He was only allowed week ends to be with his family. Aunt Amy raised a big family of black children. Charlotte's father, John Showalter, built a house in the corner of his yard for her and her children.

After Charlotte's father and mother died the slaves were divided among the children the same as their other personal property. Charlotte inherited two small slave girls. One of her sisters inherited a slave girl sixteen years old. Charlotte traded her two small girls for the older girl. Martha, whom she kept until they moved to Indiana a few years later.

A Mr. Ross lived about a mile and a half from Abraham Kinzie. He was a well-to-do farmer and owned many slaves. He was very cruel to them. One of Mr. Ross' young slave's name was Marsh. Ross would sit on a stump with a whip in his hand, and watch his slaves clear new ground. Every few minutes he would call out in a harsh voice, "Hurrah Marsh!" Marsh would always reply, "Yes Sir, I is Sir." Marsh was working with all his might, and sometimes he had a stone bruise on the toe of one foot and the heel of the other. He would go limping as fast as he could.

Marsh nor the rest of the slaves ever got to eat with Ross' family. Nor did they cook their food for them. While Ross and family ate their dinners that were previously prepared, the slaves had to stir up their corn "hobby" and bake it in the ashes, and eat and go back to work when Ross did. Sometimes Marsh would go back towards the field with a hunk of corn bread in his hands, half baked and hot, blowing it and eating it on the way. When he got so hungry he couldn't stand it any longer, he would slip up to Abraham Kinzie's back door and ask for something to eat. Charlotte would always give it to him, then tell him, "Now you go away and eat, don't let Mr. Ross catch you here." Sometimes he would hide out a couple of nights to rest up a little, then return. Ross would not whip him for it immediately but Marsh got many a lick for it later on.

During slavery the slaves were put up at public auction sales and sold like live stock. They would often bring five or six hundred dollars each. One time while John Showalter lived, there was to be a sale in the neighborhood. A black man that was to be sold came to John and begged for him to buy him, because he was good to his slaves. He said, "Oh, Massa John, please buy me! For God's sake buy me!" He begged so hard that Mr. Showalter bought him, although he really did not need him. The slave was so happy that he clapped his hands above his head and cried, "Whoopee! I'm just as near heaven as I want to be."

Before leaving Old Virginia we should mention Stephen McCraw. He was a large fat young man at that time, bald headed and feeble-minded enough to make him comical. He had no home and visited from house to house, staying a few days with each family. He was harmless, but sometimes he would become insulted, then he would go somewhere else.

He liked to haul in bark on the wheelbarrow for kindling for the women, and child-like, the more he was praised the better he would work. He usually had scraps of dress goods in his pockets that women gave him to please him. He would show them wherever he went, and sometimes he would give some of them to children.

Abraham Kinzie's brother, Christian, came to Indiana one year on a visit. He rode through on horse back and returned on the same horse, Old Ned. He visited Daniel Dillman in Cass County and visited in other counties also. When he returned, Abraham purchased the horse of him. Abraham asked Christ which of the places he had visited in Indiana he liked best. Christ said he liked it best in Cass County on Eel River. He thought it the most beautiful river he ever saw.

Abraham and Charlotte were not members of any church at that time, but they did not believe in slavery, and desired to move out of the slave states. The following spring they decided to move to Indiana. Abraham told Martha, the slave girl, that if she would go with them to Indiana he would set her free. Martha was afraid she would not see any negroes in Indiana so she said, "No Suh! You will not find me when you go to start." Abraham said, "I would not dare set you free here in Virginia because this is a slave state and I would be responsible for conduct. What shall I do with you?" She said, "Sell me to Mr. Bush, then I'll get to wear some of his red calico." Mr. Bush kept a little store in Bon-brook. So Abraham sold her to Mr. Bush. We have no record of how much he received for her.

When making arrangements to leave their old home in Virginia, Abraham heard of a young man visiting near there who was from Indiana. Abraham sent word for him to come to his home for he wished to talk with him. When he came Abraham hired him to drive a team for him on this trip. This young man was David Black. Dave also clerked Abraham's sale in Virginia.

On Sunday, March 21, 1852, they started on the long journey westward. Their many friends regretting their departure, extending their best regards, and wished them a safe journey. Even Stephen McCraw wished to express sincerity and said, "I wish you folks a good long journey."

Daniel Dillman had moved from Virginia twelve years before. He was the only man that Abraham knew in Indiana. He had written to Daniel to rent a farm for him, since he was coming west to live. The caravan that left Virginia at this time consisted of twenty five people. Abraham Kinzie, wife and seven children; Daniel Barnhart, wife and six children; Isaac Bowman, wife and two children; and four young men, John Flory, Ben Neff, John Barnhart and Dave Black. There were four covered wagons. Each family had a covered wagon and Abraham Kinzie also had a square top spring wagon (or carriage) they called "the carry-all." Old Ned was hitched to the carry-all, and Abraham's other horses' names were Logan and Kitt. Charlotte and the small children and sometimes Abraham, rode in the carry-all. Edward and John rode in the wagon with Dave Black a good deal of the time. Abraham's youngest child, Cornelius, was only about three months old at this time.

It was a long hard trip, in the spring of the year when the roads were full of water and mud a good part of the way. They were six weeks making the trip. The young men would joke and create fun which they all enjoyed in spite of the hardships. There was a sort of a reed that grew in Virginia from which the young men made pipe stems. Each of them made himself a pipe stem two or three feet long. When they came to a village they would walk down the street Indian file, each resting his pipe on the shoulder of the one in front of him.

Coming through West Virginia, the party heard of a place called "Hawk's Nest." They drove a short distance off the main road to view this place. "Hawk's Nest" was rock and earth projecting over New River. It was a quarter of a mile or more above the river. It was flat on top and probably looked like a hawk's nest from below. The people walked out on it and looked down to the trees and river far below. They would not let the children near the edge for fear they would fall.

Abraham took a tent to camp in at night, but they were fortunate to find vacant houses or country Inns to camp in every night but one. One night in West Virginia they stopped at an Inn kept by Old Colonel Early. This old man kept several slaves. During the conversation that evening the negroes from here found out that they were related to the slaves Charlotte's father had owned. They were so delighted that they claimed kin to the entire party. Next morning when they were preparing to leave, the slaves were so sorry to see them go, that they wept and gave all their "kin folks" a big twist of tobacco.

Farther along on the journey when they were looking for a place to camp they came to a country Inn where half of the building was occupied by a large family of negroes. The party had several of their things out of the wagons preparing to camp for the night, when Dave Black, full of mischief, said to John. "Put that axe in the wagon or the 'niggers' will steal it tonight." A little later Charlotte told little John to go around the house and see if he could borrow a fire shovel and a meal seive. When he asked the negro woman she said, "No Suh, I heered what your daddy said—that we steel—now you come here to borrow; we good honest folks, we don't loan to no such folks." John went back and told his Mother what the negro woman had said to him. Charlotte said, "Now Dave, you go and make that right with the negro woman." This was just fun for Dave. He went around where she was and bowed and begged her pardon and told her he was sorry that he had made such an expression—that he knew they were good honest folks. The negro woman invited him in and they sat down and had a good friendly smoke together. All was just fine then. The negro woman told him she would loan them anything in the world. Dave came back with the fire shovel and the meal seive.

One evening when they had failed to find a house or an Inn to camp in, they decided to pitch their tent at the foot of a long hill which they were about to descend. The wagons all went ahead and stopped there to make camp. The "carry all" came along behind. When the "carry all" started down the hill the holdbacks on the shafts broke and let the spring wagon run against the horse and he started to run. Old Ned ran to the bottom of the hill. When he reached the other wagons the front wheel of the "carry all" ran inside the hind wheel and up over the axle of one of the wagons, which upset the "carry all". All of the children and their belonging fell out in one pile. Charlotte was worried about the baby. She thought surely he would be killed. They soon looked through the wreckage and found the baby, Cornelius, uninjured and still asleep.

It was slow traveling over rough, muddy, unimproved roads; but they finally reached the Ohio river at Point Pleasant. There they had to cross the river on the ferry boat. The ferry boat was a large, rudely constructed affair run by horse power. There was a circle in the center where the horse went 'round and 'round furnishing power for the water wheel. The wagons were driven around this circle. Three or four teams and wagons could drive in at one time. At this time the river was very high and dangerous. A part of their crowd went across first with some other emigrants. When Abraham drove on the ferry the "carry all" was driven on last. They fastened a large gate at the back but there was a space between the bottom of the gate and the floor. When they started the ferry Old Ned snorted and backed, and became very excited. Charlotte had the lines while Abraham was elsewhere on the boat. She glanced back and saw the water, thinking there was nothing to keep the spring wagon from going off into the water, she became so frightened that she screamed and the children cried. The men came to take care of the horse and assured Charlotte that they would not be backed off into the river.

The river was raging; floating sticks and limbs caught in the water wheel and gave them much trouble. The current was so swift that they were swept down the river past the regular landing place. They finally landed where there was a bank which made it difficult to drive out of the ferry and onto the road again. The people waiting for them on the other side of the river told them that they had been afraid they would be drowned before they reached the shore.

Finally they started on their way again. Nothing much of interest occurred between this point and Indianapolis, with the exception, that the children would often throw out a coffee pot, pan, or some other small article and they would have to go back a half mile or so to find it. They drove to Indianapolis then north up the Michigan road. This road was an old corduroy road. It was so wet and soft at one time it had been "paved" with pieces of timber, or logs, laid crosswise, making a solid bottom for the road. At this time the timbers were rotting out which made great chuck holes. The wheels would go down in these places, and the men had to cut poles to pry up the wagons so they could put chunks of wood under the wheels before they could pull out.

They made very slow progress over this road. The women and children became very tired. Finally they reached Logansport. Then Charlotte said to her children: "Tomorrow we shall get to the West." All the way they had referred to their destination as the "West." So the following day, Sunday, six weeks from the time they had started, they drove in to Daniel Dillmans; twelve miles north east of Logansport, in Cass County.

How happy they were! What a relief—their long tiresome journey was ended! Charlotte told her children, "Now we are to the West." Josiah, the third from youngest child, who was four years old said, "Mother, Mother, where is the West? Mother, where is the West?" His mother said, "Oh, all around here." Josiah said, "Where is it? I can't see it, where is it?"

When they arrived at the Dillman home Abraham found that Dan had not rented a farm for him. So the next day, on Monday, May 3, 1852, they started out to look for a farm. Dan and Abraham looked at several farms, but found nothing suitable. A day or two later Dan took Abraham to see another farm that was for sale. This farm was owned by William Johnson. There was 160 acres in this farm, but only one and one half acres cleared, and a big deadening of ten acres. Only one half acre that had been in cultivation. There was a two-room log house, a log stable, a log smoke house and a large fine spring.

Johnson asked $2,000 for the farm. Abraham did not want to buy until his wife saw the place, so they went back to Dillman's for dinner. In the afternoon Dan and wife, Abraham and wife, Charlotte, and they also took John Kinzie and Mary Dillman (two of the children) along, and went down through the big woods to look at this farm. When they got there Mr. Johnson said, "I will have to have a hundred dollars more this afternoon."

Abraham and Charlotte liked the place and the big spring very much, so they told Mr. Johnson they would take it for the $2,100. Charlotte had $100 in silver that she had gotten from her father's estate, and she often said later, "If I had gone with Abraham in the morning, to look at the farm, I could have saved that hundred dollars."

Johnson could not give possession immediately, so Abraham rented a little log house on the Davie Moss farm near by. They lived here about three weeks till Johnson could give possession.

That summer Abraham put out six acres of corn in the big deadening. This "deadenning" was ten acres which had all the small brush and trees eighteen inches and under cut out, and the large trees had bark cut off around to kill them.

The big woods were full of small game, coon, opossum, squirrels and wild turkeys. Edward and John were too young to help much with the farming that summer, they only being eleven and nine years old. Abraham got hurt that summer, so he hired a hand, George Thomas, to cultivate the corn. Abraham brought a rifle along from Virginia, and George took it to the corn field when he cultivated corn. Nearly every round he would shoot one or two squirrels. The family almost lived on squirrel for awhile. In the fall when the corn was ripening the children would have to run out to the corn field and shout and make a big noise, several times a day to chase the squirrels out of the corn.

In the spring or early summer of 1859 some of the Kinzie children took the chicken pox. They were not very sick with them. John was the last to take them. One warm Sunday, around harvest time several of the neighbor boys came to the Kinzie home, as they often did. The boys decided to go swimming. John was broken out with the chicken pox, but he was not sick. Being full of life he wanted to go along with the boys. His Mother said, "You may go with them to the river, John, but you must not go in the water." John said, "Oh, no I won't."

John sat on the bank for awhile watching the rest of the boys "cutting capers" and having a good time in the water. Finally he could stand it no longer, he slipped off his clothes and went in. They all enjoyed it very much, but John stayed in the water too long. In later years he always said, "If you feel a warmth pass over you after you come out of the water, it will do you no harm; but if you chill it might go hard with you." John chilled. They went home but he could not seem to get warm for some time. In time to come every pock on his body turned to a boil. His folks did not think much about it, for the old saying was that "every boil a person had was worth a dollar to him." They thought the boils were caused by impurities in the blood, and they would be benefitted by them.

John was not very well the rest of the summer. At wheat sowing time Abraham rented a field of new ground across the road on the Moss farm. Abraham told Ed and John, "If you boys drill the wheat in the corn on the Moss place, you may have what you make off of the wheat." The boys were glad to do that. They each took a horse and a one horse drill and went to drill the wheat. They drilled in the forenoon, and went back in the afternoon. John was very tired but he wanted to do his part so he could reap part of the crop next year. His right leg hurt him so badly. He felt so hot and thirsty. He made several trips to a spring along the creek near by, to get a drink. Finally his limb hurt him so badly he could hardly go. He rested at each end of the row. Then he tried to hop on the left foot a few steps to save the other. The horse walked so fast he could not keep up any longer. Ed said, "John I believe you had better quit and go to the house. Tie Old Ned to the rail fence and I will bring him up when I come." John hated to very badly, but he could not drill any longer. He started to the house. He had to sit down and rest often; he could not walk very far at a time. He had a feeling that something terrible was going to happen to him. When he sat down to rest he would look around him, at the trees and over the fields as far as he could see to enjoy the view, for he felt like he may never get to go out there again. Finally he reached home and soon became bed fast. It developed into white swelling, and settled in the right limb. They had not had a doctor to see him up until this time. People did not summon doctors in those days like we do now.

They had a doctor from Loansport come. Later had other doctors. They lanced his limb a number of times and doctored him the best they knew how, but he did not get better. He kept his bed for eighteen months before he showed much gain. Finally he improved enough to sit up—and then be on his feet a little by some of the family helping him. He was very, very weak. One day John thought he was strong enough to walk a few steps alone. When the rest were all out of the room he undertook to cross the room for some article he wanted. When he got in the middle of the room, he was so weak he got dizzy and fell backwards flat on his back.

This made him worse again. He was confined to his bed five or six months longer. Making a total of two years, he was bedfast. But John never gave up hopes. He sometimes overheard visitors talking with some of the family, and learned they did not think he would recover. John thought that they did not know. He always put his trust in the Lord; and always said, "His will be done." He finally gained and after the two years he could be up some. He often said, "I will never forget the first time they took me out of doors, it was in the spring of the year. The grass and the trees were so pretty and green; a beautiful sight to see." He often told his children, when we are able to go and come at will, we can not appreciate the beautiful "out of doors" like one who had been deprived of that privilege for awhile.

John had running ulcers for seven years. This was discouraging. A woman doctor from Logansport told him to keep up his courage, that he would not have them longer than seven years. She said, "Every particle in a persons body is renewed every seven years." They found that to be true—in that length of time the ulcers healed up. A neighbor woman came to see him one day while he was yet bedfast, and trying to cheer him up she said, "Oh, John you will probably get up and get married yet." John thought, "Oh, my! what a foolish thing for her to say." He thought that- would never be. This affliction left John a very bad cripple; but in time he became perfectly well, and lived to a good old age. But he had to walk with a crutch the rest of his life. Several years later he picked up an education the best he could, and taught in the country schools twenty six terms. He wrote a number of pieces of poetry in his time. Many on bible subjects and some not. One of his favorites was and enigma he composed as follows:

AN ENIGMA

Altho no life do I possess
I am to life great happiness,
For the living seek my aid
When unfortunate they are made.

I am only used for helplessness,
Do their misfortune much redress;
And many a one on me depend
For daily aid in life to lend.

On me they lean for their support,
Find much relief by my resort;
And while marchin o're the land
I am faithful at their hand.

To do without me many would give
All they have upon to live,
But while they cannot change their lot—
For gold they part with me would not.

I am not used for food nor drink,
Not health, nor wealth as you may think;
But in this life do I lend aid
To mortal bodies soon decayed.

And no more use they have for me
When passed from time to eternity.
My name I shall not yet express,
The same I ask you now to guess.

Composed by John A. Kinzie in 1875.

Answer—"Crutch."

Abraham Kinzie built the barn on his farm in 1859, the second year John was bedfast; and they built the house in 1862.

AS YOU TRAVEL ALONG

As you travel along in your daily toil
Keep love in your heart—in your eyes a smile;
Give a word of cheer to those who are blue,
A warm handclasp will help some too.
A wave of the hand, a cheery "Good Day"
To those you meet or pass by the way—

As you travel along.

Start in the day with a word of prayer,
As the birds trill their notes to the morning air.
Let your prayer be to God like their songs to Heaven,
Thankful for life and the blessings given;
Thinking those thoughts that are right and good,
Doing those deeds that you feel you should—

As you travel along.

Then, when your day shall come to a close,
Just pause for awhile ere you seek repose.
Think back through your day, and the deeds that were done,
Of the trials met and the victories won;
And as you close your eyes in peaceful sleep,
Pray God in His love your soul to keep—

As you travel along.
